It's a great opportunity to:

- Meet people from a variety of organizations and disciplines within life sciences
- Informally connect and network
- Learn about TBI programs and services
- Register for membership and join TBI

Who Should Attend

Interested individuals from

- Biopharmaceutical, medical device, ag-biotech, bioenergy, diagnostic and pharmaceutical companies
- Research institutions in all life sciences
- Contract researchers, scientific research suppliers of materials, services and equipment
- Life science service providers in finance, law, insurance, environment, consulting, human resources, architecture, technology transfer, and government.

Why Should You Join TBI?

TBI membership enhances networking with other colleagues and allows members to keep well informed with current business trends in the Biotechnology sector and related medical industries. TBI initiatives include monthly breakfast meetings, annual President's Gala Dinner, Golf Tournament, Research to Revenue Conference, LinkedIn TBI Group, TBI Facebook Group, and annual Mix and Match Event. Through interaction with its diverse membership, TBI provides a superb forum for the exchange of ideas and the sharing of knowledge of technical advances.

Barbara Lavers, M.Sc., M.B.A., Consultant, TechTrans Consulting

I joined TBI after attending its featured Breakfast Meeting in Metro Hall, an excellent networking experience for me. As a small business owner, becoming a member of TBI is like stepping into a whole, new world where I can meet people from every corner of the Life Science Industry, from independent consultants to executives from large companies. Doing business or science has never been easy, so continuous support from the community is crucial for professionals to achieve their goals.

Bill L. Qin, founder of BIOCOMPLEX

TBI has become a form of a "professional home" for me. I know it will always be there to welcome me into a familiar surrounding with familiar faces and supportive attitudes. It represents to me a resource I can tap into to vet my dreams and get sober second thoughts about my ambitions. I am thankful to the members who have made it that way for me as we all built lasting friendships and grew up professionally together.

Adi Treasurywala, President, ArrowCan Partners Inc.
